HELP ON TOPIC OPTIONS

This prompt allows you to control the presentation of and access to topics in this topic message section. The following commands are available to you:

<S>how

> Instructs the system to show the topics available in this section by their topic path. You can show all topics, only those which you have joined, or only those which you have not joined. The system will prompt you for which method you want when you select the <S>how command.

<J>oin

> Allows you to join one or more topics. When you select this command, you must enter the topic path or number. If you choose to join the topic by number, you can obtain the number from the <S>how, <O>thers command (the list of those topics you have not yet joined). If the topic you select has sub-topics under it, you will have to option of joining those sub-topics as well at the same time.

> Once joined, a topic is then available to you for reading and writing messages.

<R>esign

> Allows you to resign one or more topics. When you select this command, you must enter the topic path or number. If you choose to resign the topic by number, you can obtain the number from the <S>how, <J>oined command (the list of those topics you have joined previously). If the topic you select has sub-topics under it, you will have the option of resigning from those sub-topics as well at the same time.

> Once resigned, a topic is NO LONGER available to you for reading and writing messages.

<H>elp

> Displays the help information you are reading now.
